

TNT CAPITAL

Homepage Story + Wireframe

A desktop-first scroll narrative built around the quiet Vietnam 2045 world.

One continuous journey, not eight separate sections

The user enters a version of Vietnam that already feels complete, then discovers the institution, the questions, the capital, and the builders behind that horizon.

The page should feel like one controlled cinematic editorial experience. The visual world is established once in the hero and then echoed rather than repeated. Each section changes the mode of attention: atmosphere → institution → inquiry → discipline → creation → invitation.

#	SECTION	MODE	STORY JOB
01	Hero — Vietnam 2045	HORIZON	Enter the achieved future.
02	About	INSTITUTION	Meet the firm inside that horizon.
03	Insights	INQUIRY	See the questions behind the worldview.
04	Investment Management	CAPITAL	See understanding become allocation.
05	Venture	BUILDERS	See capital meet creation.
06	Closing Invite	INVITATION	Bring the horizon back to today.
07	Footer	GROUNDING	Resolve into the institution.

Desktop grid + spacing

LAYOUT	DIRECTION
Canvas	1440 px design target; full-bleed backgrounds when called for.
Content width	Approx. 1280–1320 px maximum content frame.
Grid	12 columns with generous gutters; use 4/8, 5/7 and 3/9 splits more often than equal halves.
Outer margin	Approx. 56–72 px on desktop.
Vertical rhythm	Large section padding. Avoid compressed landing-page stacking.
Rule	One dominant idea per viewport.

Global composition rules

- Avoid default 50/50 splits unless the content truly requires symmetry.
- Headlines should occupy fewer columns than the background or image field around them.
- Use section numbering, thin rules, and alignment as structure before adding containers.
- Allow at least one quiet transition zone between the major cinematic moments.
- Do not carry image-heavy composition through every section; contrast is part of the story.

Reading width

Keep body copy narrow even when the section is wide. The page can feel expansive without making paragraphs expansive. Large scale belongs to headlines, image fields, and whitespace.

Arrival: Vietnam 2045 is already here

The first screen should not explain the future. It should place the visitor inside it.

LAYOUT	DIRECTION
Height	100–110 svh.
Background	Full-bleed landscape photography or slow cinematic loop.
Image logic	Wide green terrain + one intentional human-built or productive element + distant horizon.
Header	Top overlay, transparent at load. Minimal navigation.
Hero text	Eyebrow → H1 → 2-line body → primary + secondary CTA.
Bottom navigation	A restrained horizontal index: About / Insights / Investment Management / Venture / Explore.
2045 cue	Present once in eyebrow or context label; do not turn the hero into a “2045 campaign.”

Composition

Keep the object or path in the landscape away from the copy. The image needs one area of intentional calm where the content plate can sit without fighting the scene. The horizon should remain visible; it is the central metaphor.

Motion

- Extremely slow foreground/background separation or parallax.
- Natural movement only: mist, grass, water, light, shadow.
- Content plate enters with a soft fade and short upward ease.
- No animated numbers, futuristic data overlays, particles, or glowing linework.

The first impression should be: “I want to be in this future,” not “this website is showing me the future.”

From atmosphere to institution

The hero earns attention emotionally. About must immediately convert that attention into institutional clarity.

LAYOUT	DIRECTION
Height	Approx. 75–90 svh.
Surface	White.
Top cue	Small label “ABOUT” aligned to the grid.
Primary statement	Large H2/H1-scale statement across 6–8 columns.
Body	Two short paragraphs, max 4–5 columns wide.
CTA	“Read about the firm →” as a text link.
Imagery	None, or one very restrained small image if needed. Prefer no image in v1.

Suggested placement

Place the label in columns 1–2. Let the statement begin around columns 3–4 and run toward column 10. Put the body and CTA lower-right beneath the statement. The section should feel spacious enough that the visitor notices the change from cinematic landscape to white institutional calm.

Transition from hero

Do not use a hard decorative divider. Let the hero image end, then introduce a generous white field. A tiny 2045 reference can disappear here; the concept remains in the atmosphere rather than the text.

Inquiry: prove the worldview is studied

Insights is the evidence layer. It turns the 2045 theme from belief into a research practice.

LAYOUT	DIRECTION
Surface	TNT Mist or White with a strong editorial rule.
Intro row	Eyebrow “03 / INSIGHTS” + title on left; deck + “Explore all insights →” on right.
Article grid	6 cards, 3 × 2 desktop.
Card width	4 columns each.
Card image	Landscape 3:2 or 4:3; no rounded SaaS cards.
Text hierarchy	Category → title → 1–2 line deck → date.
Interaction	Entire card clickable. Subtle image crop/scale on hover.
Section height	Content-driven; likely 125–150 svh depending on card imagery.

How 2045 appears here

Not as background art. It appears through subject selection: businesses, capital markets, technology, industrial capability, urban transformation, global positioning, and other forces that make the long horizon concrete.

Visual rule

This should feel like opening an intelligent publication inside an investment firm — not scrolling a company blog.

Discipline: understanding becomes allocation

This is the most controlled section of the homepage. The grid should tighten and imagery should recede.

LAYOUT	DIRECTION
Height	Approx. 95–115 svh.
Surface	Soft Gray or TNT Mist.
Layout	5/7 split.
Left	Eyebrow, title, short deck, CTAs. Left column may remain sticky for part of the scroll.
Right	Three principles stacked vertically with 01 / 02 / 03 labels and thin dividers.
Imagery	None in the first version.
Motion	Principles enter one by one with short vertical easing; no scroll theatrics.
CTA	Explore Investment Management → / Talk to us →

Why the visual language changes

The homepage has moved from a national horizon to investment judgment. The section should feel like a reduction of noise: fewer images, stronger alignment, more rules, more accountability. This contrast gives the later Venture section room to become visually alive again.

Builders: open the page back up

Venture is where the abstract horizon becomes human and productive. It should feel more alive than Investment Management without becoming startup theater.

LAYOUT	DIRECTION
Height	Approx. 105–125 svh.
Surface	Dark Green.
Text	White headings, TNT Mist body.
Layout	Intro text in 5 columns; visual field occupying 7 columns or full-width lower band.
Imagery	1–2 images only: founder/building/productive scene + landscape or system detail.
Image treatment	Large rectangular crops, no floating-card collage.
Motion	Slightly more visible than earlier sections: image reveal, gentle crop shift, restrained hover.
CTA	Our venture approach → / Talk to us →

The image brief

- Show people building, operating, designing, testing, producing, or maintaining.
- Prefer real environments over staged portraits.
- Keep the scene calm and capable — no “hustle” visual language.
- If technology appears, it should be a tool inside the environment, not the visual identity of the future.

Narrative role

Public markets show TNT allocating into existing capability. Venture shows TNT participating earlier in capability still being formed. That contrast should be understood even if the visitor reads only the headlines.

Return to the horizon, then resolve

The ending should echo the emotional stillness of the hero without simply repeating the opening image.

LAYOUT	DIRECTION
Closing height	Approx. 70–85 svh.
Surface	Dark Green continuing from Venture, or Dark Green transitioning into a very low-contrast landscape.
Headline	Large, two-line statement: “Our horizon is long. The conversation can start today.”
Body	One short paragraph.
CTA	Start a conversation →
Visual cue	A horizon line, quiet landscape edge, or almost-subliminal image can return behind or below the copy.
Footer	White or TNT Mist; 4-column information structure; no dramatic animation.

Closing behavior

The hero starts with a long-range idea. The closing converts it into a present action. This gives the page a complete loop: the visitor enters 2045, understands TNT’s role, and returns to today with a reason to engage.

Footer hierarchy

- TNT Capital identity + one-line descriptor.
- Research: Insights / Vietnam 2045 / Weekend TNT.
- Firm: About / Investment Management / Venture / Contact.
- Newsletter: short blurb + email capture.
- Legal: Privacy / Terms / LinkedIn / copyright.

The transitions are part of the story

TRANSITION	VISUAL SHIFT	STORY MEANING
Hero → About	Image → white space	Arrival becomes clarity. Let the cinematic scene fall away completely.
About → Insights	White → editorial structure	Institution becomes inquiry. Introduce more rules, cards, and metadata.
Insights → Investment Management	Editorial density → disciplined grid	Questions become decisions. Reduce imagery and tighten alignment.
Investment Management → Venture	Light structured field → Dark Green visual field	Allocation becomes creation. Increase visual energy without increasing noise.
Venture → Closing	Dark Green → Dark Green / horizon echo	Builders reconnect to the long horizon.
Closing → Footer	High-emphasis → utility	Emotion resolves into institutional information.

Overall pace

The page should breathe. Do not make every viewport fully occupied. Use slower, larger transitions near the hero and closing; use faster, clearer transitions through Insights and Investment Management. The visitor should never feel trapped in a scroll effect.

Atmosphere at the edges. Clarity in the middle. That is the rhythm of the homepage.

Homepage at a glance

SECTION	SPACE / SURFACE	FEELING
HEADER	Overlay / transparent	Quiet authority
HERO	100–110 svh / full-bleed landscape	The achieved horizon
ABOUT	75–90 svh / White	The institution
INSIGHTS	125–150 svh / Mist or White	The questions
INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT	95–115 svh / Soft Gray or Mist	The discipline
VENTURE	105–125 svh / Dark Green	The builders
CLOSING	70–85 svh / Dark Green + horizon echo	The invitation
FOOTER	Content-driven / White or Mist	The grounding

Final screen test

If the page is shown without its copy, the sequence should still communicate: calm horizon → institution → research → discipline → building → return to horizon. If that visual story is visible, the 2045 theme is working at the right level of subtlety.

Next production step

Build a visual reference board for each of the six major homepage moments, then translate this blueprint into a low-fidelity desktop wireframe before styling the final high-fidelity page. Image selection should be treated as a design task, not as final decoration.
